MASTER SPY DIES AT 75

Mr Allen Dulles, the former chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, who died late on Wednesday in Georgetown University Hospital Washington. He was 75.

The former US master spy headed the intelligence agency from 1953 until his retirement in 1961.

He was first appointed CIA Chief by former President Eisenhower and then asked to continue in his $22,000-a-year job by the late President Kennedy.

Mr Dulles's resignation as CIA head came a few months after the Bay of Pigs fiasco. However, he had planned to retire before the Cuban incident.

Mr Dulles was a brother of the late US Secretary of State (Mr John Foster Dulles).
